Investment strategy

SKAGEN m2 provides exposure to a normally difficult to access global real estate market. The fund selects low-priced, high-quality real estate companies from around the world. The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon. Subscriptions are made in fund units and not directly in stocks or other securities. The benchmark reflects the fund's investment mandate. Since the fund is actively managed, the portfolio will deviate from the composition of the benchmark.

Monthly commentary, November 2024

In November, the US election took centre stage, with US real estate surging due to the so-called "Trump growth trade." This was an unexpected development for real estate, given that treasury yields climbed sharply for most of the month amid concerns that Trump's policies could drive inflation.

The rally in US real estate was further bolstered by another rate cut from the Federal Reserve. Meanwhile, the Bank of England also implemented a rate cut during the same period. US-listed real estate valuations remain significantly higher than their European counterparts, two major markets balanced within the fund's portfolio.

The fund's three top performers in November were all US-based companies, led by the global data centre company Equinix. Equinix emerged as the best performer, benefiting from the persistent imbalance between the demand for data centre capacity and the limited supply. This trend is expected to continue due to the high costs of construction, power constraints, and the overall complexity of data centre operations.

The largest detractor in November was the US digital real estate company Digital Bridge, which faced headwinds after delivering a disappointing earnings report and lowering its guidance for the year.

SKAGEN m2 focuses on resilient companies operating in trend-driven subsegments that are mispriced, capable of performing under various market conditions, and supported by solid balance sheets and inflation-adjusted contracts. We remain optimistic about the long-term outlook for global real estate, particularly as we enter a phase of higher earnings driven by a lower cost of capital. In times of short-term volatility and market challenges, maintaining a disciplined approach to stock selection is critical.

Our ESG approach is built on four pillars. In keeping with SKAGEN's active investment philosophy, our sustainability activities centre on active engagement with our holding companies, which is where we believe we can have the greatest impact.
